

RICHARD RIEHLE

Richard Riehle is one of the best and busiest character actors in TV and movies – his credit list runs seven pages! With his bushy moustache and twinkle in his eye, Riehle was the picture perfect choice to play “Mayor Nobel Doyle” in The 12 Dogs of Christmas. In the last 12 months since completing that role, Riehle has worked on 8 other movies as well as finding time to appear in many television episodes including a two-part Star Trek: Enterprise and reprising his recurrent role of “Walt Finnerty” in Grounded for Life. Riehle received his B.A. in acting from Notre Dame and has had extensive experience as a stage actor, making his Broadway debut in 1986. In 1999 he played opposite Kevin Spacey in the acclaimed revival of O’Neill’s “The Iceman Cometh”. When he finds the time, Riehle continues to teach acting and participate in theatre workshops.
